REGULATING TRANSPORTATION NETWORK SERVICES, IMPOSING AND AUTHORIZING FEES, PROVIDING PENALTIES FOR VIOLATIONS THEREOF
AND FOR OTHER PURPOSES

EXPLANATORY NOTE

One of the reasons for the worsening traffic situation in the Philippines is the overpopulation of vehicles in the metropolitan area. Thousands of public utility vehicles (PUVs) and private vehicles clog the streets of Manila every day, which results in traffic jams along the main highways and major roads. As a consequence, not only is the transport of commuters delayed and their time wasted but the country as a whole suffers economic losses. According to Socioeconomic Planning Secretary Arsenio Balisacan, "the Philippines is losing P2.4 billion a day in potential income due to traffic congestion that eats up time that could have been used for productive pursuits." The National Economic and Development Authority (NEDA) proposes that the primary solution to the traffic situation is still the improvement of transportation infrastructure. However, we cannot standstill while waiting for the government to develop our transportation network. We must look for alternatives to alleviate the suffering of our people in their daily commute.

It is therefore high time that we recognize the potential of Transportation Network Services (TNS) to spur advancements in the transportation industry. The emergence of Transportation Network Vehicle Services (TNVS) such as Uber and Grab

Taxi provides commuters more choices in their daily commute. The additional competition in the transportation industry will compel existing taxi operators to improve their service in terms of convenience, safety and efficiency. Furthermore, ridesharing will help decongest roads by encouraging vehicle owners to leave their car at home and utilize a transportation network service instead.

In lieu of this development, the DOTC issued Department Order No. 2005-011 (DO No. 15-011) to recognize the new nature of ridesharing services. It intends to modernize and improve transportation services by the innovative use of technology to facilitate ridesharing services between a Transportation Network Driver (TND) and a Transportation Network Passenger (TNP). DO No. 15-011 allowed Transportation Network Companies (TNC) to operate in the Philippines and facilitate transactions between a TND and a TNP. It also provides the guidelines for the selection and accreditation of drivers.

However, DO No. 15-011 has faced heavy opposition since its promulgation. Taxi operators allege that the said Order offers unfair competition in favor of TNCs and TNVs because they are not subject to the same regulation as that of taxis. Some Congressmen also expressed their reservation citing issues on liability and tax collection.

This bill seeks to address these questions by defining the nature of TNCs and TNVs. First and foremost is the classification of TNCs and Transportation Network Vehicles as a public utility. TNCs and TNVs are obligated under a contract of carriage once a passenger avails of their service. As a common carrier, liability attaches once the contract between a TNP, a TNV, and a TNC is executed. A TNC therefore cannot evade liability by contending that they are merely a technological platform to connect the TNP with the TND. The TNC is the means and method by which the transportation service is arranged and facilitated. Furthermore, they amass profit from facilitating the TNVS. The TNCs cannot have their cake and it eat too. They must be responsible for the service they provide and be held liable for any breach on the contract of carriage.

This bill also provides the standards in the accreditation of transportation network service providers and ensure the qualification of their drivers. It also requires the TNDs to issue electronic receipts for passenger safety and taxation purposes.

It is our intention to ensure that regulation is not a hindrance, but continues to be the safety net that the public can rely on for its protection.¹ In the interest of transportation development and public service, support for the passage and approval of this legislation is earnestly sought.
